YOUTH ARRESTED IN EXTORTION PLOT

'ROUND 'N' 'ROUND

Great Britain faces a crisis in its Indian situation.

Open revolt stares the British authorities in the face. At any time rioting may spread from boundary line to boundary line.

Eager hill tribes at the mouth of the Khyber pass, held back by the British garrisons, eagerly wait for India to flame forth in open rebellion.

With the British troops withdrawn from the scene, the hillmen will sweep down upon India — as they have done centuries ago.

It is a hard situation for the English government to handle.

With the loss of Colonel Sidar, Mexico lost its prestige.

All Mexico is mourning for its lost son and his companion, whose body will probably never be found.

Arnold Bennett compares the American newspapermen with the American dentists for speed and accuracy.

Bennett probably was never inside of a shop on a dull day.

One never realizes just how vital a newspaper is to one — until there is no newspaper.

Several years ago, New York was hit by a pressman's strike.

As a result John J. Citizen didn't get his breakfast reading.

The city was almost paralyzed. Merchants lost millions of dollars. The public was completely out of touch with the rest of the world — even New York.

Ever stop to think of the amount of work that goes into the printing of that paper you used to wrap up junior's winter rubbers in?

An accident occurs. Ten men are killed.

A "leg man" is dispatched to the scene of the crash. From a nearby telephone he phones in the details of the crash to the "re-write" man.

The "re-write" man, with the aid of the notes telephoned him, writes the story on a battered old Underwood.

The story is then passed to the city editor, who reads it through and passes it on to the copy desk.

Here it is read, corrected and headed and shot down a slot in the composing room.

A linotype operator picks up a gob of copy and sits down at his clicking machine. Line after line of type is cast.

The paper is then made up, stereotyped and placed upon the gigantic presses.

In another few minutes the world learns that "TEN MEN MEET DEATH IN TRAIN CRASH."

John J. Citizen picks up his paper, glances at it, yawns, and remarks, "Huh, nothing in the paper at all" and looks for the sport page.

POLICE HOLD WRITER OF NOTES

GLENDALF, May 13.—UP—An asserted extortion plot directed at Mrs. F. W. Emery, wealthy Pasadena woman, was uncovered by police late today when Bernard Swalley, 21, Birmingham, Ala., was arrested as he dashed to a cache where $3,000 had been resting for five days awaiting the writers of threatening notes received by Mrs. Emery.

The arrest of Swalley, a student at the Pasadena junior college, was followed by those of Leo Trimley, 21, also a junior college student, Jack Harbach, 21, and Sylvester Bertham, 24, accused by police of having participated in the scheme.

Police Lieut. William F. Hynes of the Los Angeles department, said the case had its inception last April 29, when Mrs. Emery received the first note at her expensive San Marino estate.

The letter signed "The Gang" and "J. C. Allen," demanded the $3,000 on threats that Mrs. Emery would be harmed and her magnificent home burned if the money was not hidden near the Emery residence.

Lieut. Hynes disguised himself as a gardener while he watched the patch where the money was hidden. Other detectives, armed with rifles were in bushes by shifts. The officers were taken to and from the estate in laundry wagons and vegetable carts. Swalley offered no resistance when the officers surrounded him. Hynes said the youth declared he wanted the money to continue college and make a trip to his home. Investigation disclosed, the officers said, that the youth's parents were wealthy, and that he had plenty of money for his needs.

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—UP—The district attorney's office announced today that efforts to locate Herman Shapiro, attorney, of the 8-year old murder case of Fred Osterreich, had been futile. His three other children were saved.

Octave meanwhile carried out three of his smaller brothers and sisters, ran back into the house to see what had happened to his father and mother, and himself was trapped in the smoke filled structure. Another sister, Gilberte, died also when her clothing caught fire.

High School Play Brings Out Firemen

Rehearsals for the Richmond Union high school Varsity Show last night were the indirect cause for the calling out of the Richmond fire department and the aroused interest in a possible conflagration by the majority of local residents, who thronged street corners and raced in automobiles to view the supposed blaze.

From Twenty-third street, a passerby glanced at the high school auditorium and was astounded to see the interior of the room supposedly in flames. Rushing to the nearest alarm box he rapidly turned in the alarm, with such efficiency that Engines No. 3 and 4 and truck No. 1 of the Richmond Fire department, as well as hundreds of people arrived simultaneously on the scene of the supposed fire.

Upon reaching the high school the fire fighters unrolled hoses from the engines and shortly after rolled them up again upon seeing that what was apparently a gigantic fire in the interior of the school was but the reflection cast by the stained glass windows by the lights of the auditorium.

Inside, unperturbed about the commotion and innocent rehearsal had caused, pupils of the high school continued their practice for the show, and hundreds of on-lookers slowly went their various ways.

LEGALITY OF SPEED LAW TO BE TESTED

A case that may affect the speeding laws in the entire state will come before Judge A. A. Alstrom in the Richmond justice court Thursday, May 22.

Attorney Will S. Roberson, acting for Albert C. Peterson, 37 Crest avenue, speaking on behalf of his client, said that several sections of the state motor vehicle law of 1915 were not enacted when the last state legislature amended the laws.

For this reason, Roberson said, his client, who is charged with driving his automobile 68 miles an hour in a 40-mile zone, is exempt from being fined or serving a jail sentence.

Trial Date Set

Judge Alstrom set Thursday, May 22, as the date of trial.

"There may be something to the attorney's contention," Judge Alstrom said, in commenting on the case.

"The case will have a far-reaching effect on all speeding in the state. The case will go to the higher courts, no matter how I decide it."

Carry Case

The attorney said that if he meets with an unfavorable verdict in the local court, he will take the matter up with the supreme court. If his point is won, it will mean that California has no speed law.

In explaining his side of the case, Roberson said that the last state legislature adopted a measure amending the state motor vehicle laws. Sections of the old state law not amended remained in force as originally adopted, Roberson reasoned. The amended law, he said, does not mention the original and unchanged portions of the law, and so, not being mentioned in the revised and present law, makes them null and void.

Asking the details left out in this way from the amended law, Roberson concluded, is a clause fixing speed limits in the state. For this reason, he said, there is no speed limit.

Roberson's client, Albert Peterson was arrested recently by State Traffic Officer Charles Nissen.

ODD FELLOWS CARRYING ON! NINE BEATS FIREMEN

The Richmond Odd Fellows earned their second victory of the Richmond City Twilight baseball league season last night by trouncing the Firemen 9 to 1 in a stormy battle on the Richmond Union high school field.

Disputes over strike-outs, disputes over stolen bases, and disputes over foul balls provided much of the excitement in yesterday's hectic tussle.

The fire fighters were found badly lacking yesterday, while the Odd Fellows had a big day romping around the bases.

Orr Pitches
Orr, pitching for the lodgemen, held the Firemen to five hits. He succeeded in whiffing seven prospective sluggers, and allowed four walks.

Hathaway started chucking for the Firemen, and held the Odd Fellows to nine hits until the sixth inning, when Kamb entered the box for the losing team. Kamb allowed three hits.

Gordon did the spectacular hitting of the game, garnering a homer and a double for the Odd Fellows. Moltz also did well at the plate yesterday, collecting two doubles and a single out of four times at bat.

The Odd Fellows gained two runs in the first inning, two in the third, two in the fifth, and three in the sixth. The Firemen scored in the fifth.

The Standard Oil nine and the Lions will mix Friday afternoon on the high school field at 5:15 o'clock in the next City Twilight league game.

BARREL HOUSE, A'S INCREASE REFINERY TO MEET TODAY LEAD WITH VICTORY

The second week of the 1930 Standard Oil Twilight baseball league season, will open this afternoon, when the Barrel House and Refinery nines cross bats on the First street diamond at 5:15 o'clock.

The Barrel House outfit will attempt to go into the lead in the league standing this afternoon in its cash with the Refinery. The Barrel House athletes have suffered no defeats and gauged one victory. The Mechanics possess a similar record, while the all-Standards and Refinery are at the bottom of the list with one defeat and no wins each.

Although losing their game by a score of 7 to 5, to the Mechanics last Wednesday, the Refinery boys are expected to make it plenty hot for the triumphant Barrel House this afternoon on the First street lot.

The Standard Oil baseball season got off to a good start last Wednesday when practically the entire baseball populace of Richmond crammed the First street bleachers to witness the Mechanics and Refinery come to grips. The crowds persisted at the second game of the season, and it is generally believed that this year's league is in for great popularity among local diamond fans.

Competition For Girl Squad Position Keen

CORVALLIS, Ore., May 13.—UP—Competition for berths on the Oregon State College football team this spring has been so keen that any man who missed a night of practice was liable to find his place occupied by a new man when he returned.

For some time, the Orangemen, under the guidance of Paul J. Scisler, head coach, have been going through the annual spring practice. Weather conditions have been such that some of the practice has been done in the college armory.

Coach Scisler is enthusiastic over the showing of the men this year and says that the spring practice has been the most satisfactory since he came here.

The 1929 guards and centers, with the exception of Bob Geddes who has completed three years of varsity competition, are out for spring practice.

Buck Hamer, guard, has been shifted to center, and will stay there, according to indications. Jack Cox and Chief Coquille Thompson were moved from the guard positions last year and will probably continue there next fall.

Scisler is still uncertain on the Orange tackle positions. He has been doing considerable shifting during spring practice.

The Los Angeles Angels, who had held top place for more than a week, fared badly in the series opener at Oakland, the Oaks winning, 7 to 3.

Thomas of Sacramento and Jacobs of the Seals staged a brilliant battle in the box, each allowing only five hits. Both Sacramento runs were made in the same way. Osborn, the Senators' right fielder, came home from second on Koehler's single in the fifth inning and Rohwer, their left fielder, made the winning run in the ninth when his single scored Hoag from second base. Two doubles in the fifth made one run for the Seals.

Three singles and an error accounted for the first five runs by Oakland and Vergez, the Oaks third baseman, hit a homer in the eighth with one on. Dittmar's homer in the first of the ninth with one on was the feature of play by Los Angeles.

Seattle climbed within striking distance of the first division by beating Hollywood, 6 to 3, and the San Francisco Missions defeated Portland, 10 to 5 the game having a total of seven errors.

JANET, CHARLES WIN APPLAUSE FILM

Another sensational triumph was scored by the most popular pair of screen sweethearts, Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, when their latest Fox Movietone musical romance, "High Society Blues," had its premier local performance at the Fox-California theater last night.

There is no more charming couple in pictures than the winsome Miss Gaynor and the handsome and virile Farrell, and when they are given a proper vehicle, such as "High Society Blues," they present a superlative entertainment that wins instant appeal.

Even greater than the personal triumph they scored in "Sunny Side Up" was the reception accorded these young players by last night's capacity audience.

Both stars again sing, Miss Gaynor in her appealing voice which charms as no other voice we know of and Farrell in his crooning baritone. Both show a distinct advancement, musically, over "Sunny Side Up" ample proof that this production is great entertainment.

Five song numbers are sung by the stars, of which at least "Just Like a Story Book," "I'm in the Market for You" and "Eleanor," seem certain of national popularity. "Just Like a Story Book" has the same piquant quality which made "I'm a Dreamer, Aren't We All" in "Sunny Side Up."

Miss Gaynor and Farrell, mostly strum their own accompaniments on ukuleles, both playing unusually well.

The supporting cast, including William Collier, Sr., Joyce Compton, Hedda Hopper, Louise Fazenda and Lucien Littlefield, all contribute excellent performances.

The story of "High Society Blues" centers about two families, the Divines and the Grangers. The latter sells his chain of grocery stores to the former.

The Grangers, wealthy beyond their dreams, go east to enjoy life and buy an estate next door to that of the Divines. Efforts of the middle western Grangers to be neighborly with the ultra society leading Divines meet only with rebuffs. However, the daughter of one and the son of the other family find a common ground through their interest in Hawaiian ukuleles and friendship ripens. Complications arise which make the romance at one time see hopeless.

David Butler, who directed, has turned in another highly satisfactory picture, the equal, if not the superior of his "Sunny Side Up."

"High Society Blues" is excellent entertainment and we are certain it will please your eyes and ears. Also on the program is an 1812 Overture and Jimmie Hussey pounds out a good bill.

Disappearing Tar Used For Chewing

VENTURA, May 3.—UP—Police today were convinced that the mystery of the disappearance of tar from crevices in certain concrete streets of Ventura had been cleared up for good. The officers finally traced the black tar to a school and found that children had been using the tar for chewing gum.

They were warned to stop the practice.

DICK GRAYCE IN THRILL CRASH IN TALKIE

Dick Grace has captured the curiosity of America. Films show his work, popular magazines carry his stories, and the radio will soon broadcast his adventures. Grace is a dare-devil. His name is synonymous with clever cunning at cheating death by a bare inch or two. He is a mocker of fate; the sky is his playground, a wrecked plane his broken toy.

Where other men have excelled at topping dizzy heights in the sky and making their planes perform like trained birds, Grace has done this, and, in addition, has carved a unique place in flying circles by the amazing way in which he deliberately crashes planes. To date, 33 ships have been wrecked by him. Of the two hundred bones in his body, Grace has broken 69, including his neck and back.

Almost every big air moving picture hears the mark of his talent. In "Wings," "Lilac Time," "The Big Hop," "The Air Circus" and, now, in "Young Eagles," which will show at the Fox-California theater, starting tomorrow for two days, the former dare-devil war ace has flown his planes, flying in the face of chance.

Also a Mack Sennett comedy entitled "Scotch" and Kiddie Cabaret completes the program.

F. Parr Tells Kiwanis Club Of Barrier

The back country and the large cities around San Francisco bay must hang together in working out a solution of the water conservation problem in northern California.

This was the message given to the Kiwanis club in the Sonoma Valley Inn yesterday by Fred D. Parr, of San Francisco, vice president of the Salt Water Barrier association.

"Our interests are mutual," said Parr. "The back country must have water and must be protected from the intrusion of salt which has already threatened new and larger areas of fertile land. The cities need the business which naturally must flow in to such communities as San Francisco or Oakland and from prosperous hinterlands."

"The movement in favor of erecting a low concrete dam to be known as a salt water barrier somewhere in Carquinez straits or San Pablo bay has not been hastily conceived. It is the result of careful thought and constant engineering study extending over the past ten years. The eminent engineer Walker R. Young of the United States Reclamation Service has spent two years and the government invested $85,000 in making an exhaustive study to learn whether a barrier will really solve the problem and whether it is practical to build it at all. Young said yes to both of these questions in a two-volume report which has become the Bible of the bay barrier advocates. Young has submitted designs and figures for three different sites and has ruled that the bay barrier will end the menace of salt in the straits and in the delta.

"The Salt Water Barrier association has no site in mind for the barrier. We believe this is not the time to settle that question but would rather leave it to the decision of state and federal engineers when the time comes. We are in favor of a barrier at any point that will bring the greatest results and conflict with the fewest interests."

Parr said the Barrier association has directors from all important cities of California from Red Bluff to San Francisco and that it will campaign aggressively from now on to make sure that the barrier is included in any plan to water conservation that may be adopted.

SOUND COLOR GRANDEUR

When such pictures as King of Jazz with Paul Whiteman and his gang reach the sound screen, we feel thankful for the science that harnesses sound with motion pictures.

With each big name coming to the screen, we seem to appreciate less the fact that none of these big personalities would have been possible in the same measure without sound.

Paul Whiteman in a silent picture would have been absolutely impossible but with the possibility of registering his hand and the music they create, it establishes him as one of the most sought for personalities in the theatrical firmament.

While orchestras were probably the first to be thought of in connection with sound pictures, Whiteman is really the initial big name to be used by the producers.

An interesting thing in connection with sound that is not generally known outside of the industry is that we are all prone to accept the various wonders of the inventive genius without looking into the manner and technical phases—is that when sound is a part of the film itself—that is that portion of the film known as the sound track and which runs along side of the picture—the sound track does not actually synchronize with the picture.

We might explain it in this manner. When the speaker opens his mouth to say "Hello" the actual photograph of these words on the sound track is not opposite the picture, but, nineteen frames or pictures ahead.

This is due to the fact that two lights are used in reproducing sound and pictures. As the beam from the projecting light would effect the light used for reproducing sound, they are placed some distance apart. This does not mean they are not in synchronization. The sound light is placed in frames above the projection light but throws its ray through the sound track agreeing with the lip action at the same instant. To some this has been confusing as they were of the opinion both lights were parallel.

Record reproducing which is used by a number of companies is very simple. These records come in very large size. An arrow marks what is indicated the starting point. On the film a blank frame without picture has been inserted known as a starting frame. This blank frame is placed directly in front of the picture. When the machine is started for the film the record also starts with the same switch.

And we forget to mention that King of Jazz is in color. Technicolor color is used to splendid advantage in this production. Giving a richness and naturalness to all scenes.

LEGALITY OF HOME BREW UPHELD

WASHINGTON, May 13.—UP—Qualified approval of the legality of home-brewing and of congressmen who drink, but vote dry, was expressed today by Superintendent Scott McBride, of the anti-saloon league before the senate lobby committee.

The league supports only a "few" drinking congressmen, he hastened to state, and it is interested in the personal habits of candidates and congressmen.

Opinion that home-brewing was legal was followed immediately by the statement that the law has a few loopholes, and is not 100 per cent perfect.

Denies Purchase
McBride denied the league had brought out, or even knew of Representative Franklin Fort's dry candidacy against Ambassador Morrow for the New Jersey senatorial nomination. He admitted he helped antisaloon league officials draft a statement expressing hope that the drys would have a candidate to vote for, but said he was surprised to hear Fort was intending to run.

The committee postponed further examination of McBride until next Tuesday. The committee's inquiry into the mysterious $48,000 which Bishop James Cannon Jr., collected for the anti-Smith campaign in Virginia, and then didn't account for, was postponed until Cannon's own appearance, probably late this month.

Tells of Work
Blaine demanded the committee subpoena Justin Stewart, league employee, whose biography of the late Wayne B. Wheeler, has been republished by the league as inaccurate. The volume portrayed Wheeler as very active behind the scenes in Washington lobbying. The Wisconsin senator also asked that Sebastian Kresge, the dime store king, and heavy contributor to the league, be called to explain financial details.

The league leader told of "mission states" in which the national league pays the salaries of the state superintendents, naming New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada, Idaho, Montana and Wyoming. Committee members asked if these were anything like Senator Grunty's "backyard states."

Plot To Kidnap Son Of Film Actor Revealed

HOLLYWOOD, May 13.—UP—The chauffeur of Harry Carey, prominent motion picture actor, electrified the calm of Hollywood's police station late today, by telling a harrowing tale of pursuit by men intent on kidnapping Harry Carey Jr., student at a military school.

The chauffeur, T. W. Weaver, declared he was pursued by a car while he was driving young Carey to school in the actor's automobile. After racing 70 miles per hour, he finally delivered the youth to his teachers, police said Weaver reported.

Weaver further related that on the way home the men caught up with him and demanded to know the whereabouts of young Carey.

The chauffeur said he pulled a revolver and the men fled. Captain Joe Miller of the Hollywood division said he was investigating all angles of the alleged kidnapping attempt, and also was investigating rumors that Weaver had been subject to hallucinations he was being "followed" since he was injured several years ago.

Man Hunted In Legal Squabble

SACRAMENTO, May 13.—UP—A squabble between Sacramento county and Texas state authorities resulted today in the granting of extradition papers for S. R. Beamer, but nobody, apparently, knows where he is now.

Beamer was released Saturday at noon because of the law which specifies that a prisoner cannot be held longer than 15 days on a fugitive warrant. Beamer is wanted in Bay City, Tex., to face five liquor charges and three embezzlement charges.

Sheriff Joe Mangum, of Bay City, who arrived here Friday to return Beamer, insists that Sacramento officers failed to co-operate with him and enabled his prisoner to escape.

FRUIT SORTER INSTALLED IN CANNERY

A mammoth fruit sorter, the largest of its kind in the world, built entirely of steel, and reaching almost across the cannery building, has been installed in the new Felice and Perrelli cannery, now under construction on the Richmond inner harbor.

The gigantic sorter is one of the latest models to be used, and will sort any kind of fruit in a great number of sizes.

During the past week most of the machinery to be used in the cannery has been unloaded and is being assembled in the building.

John Perrelli, who is personally helping to supervise the installation of the machinery, declares that the new cannery is the most modern equipped in the world. He stated that when the machinery is installed and ready for operation, hardly a human hand will be needed to touch the fruit from the time it starts through the machines until the time it is canned and crated. Even then, the peeling of the fruit will be done by machine.

According to an estimate by Perrelli, approximately 500 persons will be employed in the cannery, which, when in full operation is expected to turn out about 10,000 cases a day.

Perrelli declared that at the rate work on the new structure is progressing, it should be completed by June 15 or 20, but at any rate would be ready to operate by June 25, the opening of the canning season.

With about 100 men working on the building, the office is nearing completion and the new equipment will be installed immediately.

Junior Traffic Police Force To Hold Safety Day

Protection of children from death or injuries in motor vehicle accidents will be the theme of a great parade and demonstration by the Junior Traffic Reserve of Oakland on May 17, under the joint direction of the Eastbay Safety council and the police department, according to announcement by Arthur W. Moore, president of the Reserve organization.

Moore said that the Junior Traffic Reserve was organized in February of 1928 to protect children at school crossings and to give the people, themselves, the responsibility for this task. He said that the organization was fulfilling its purpose, inasmuch as there have been no accidents of any kind at school intersections where reserve units are on duty but that children continue to be victims of motor vehicle elsewhere in the city. In 1929 there was a total of nine child fatalities and so far in 1930 five children under sixteen years of age have been killed.

"The most tragic thing about automobile accidents is that so many of the victims are children. Children are so ignorant of the hazards surrounding them. Last year, out of 80 fatal accidents, five were children under 16 years of age," said Moore.

"If we are to do what we can to save these little lives, we must realize at once that practically all accidents to children can be prevented. Thoughtless neglect and carelessness on the part of adults are often the causes of most of the accidents."

"Where children are in or near the road go slowly. You can't even guess what they may do next. Juries give little consideration to the driver who injures a child. Always be able to stop when you see children playing. Sound your horn. Be on the look-out for school signs. Go slowly by school buildings and playgrounds. Observe and obey the signals of the Junior Traffic Reserve, they are working for your protection as well as safeguarding the lives of the school children. Never let children ride on the running board nor look on behind."

The parade is in charge of the directors of the Reserve, George L. Doolan and Carl L. Anderson, and will move through the principal downtown streets. It will pass the reviewing stand at the City Hall and will terminate at the Orpheum theater where they boys will be guests of the management at a free show.

FLIER FAILS TO SMASH RECORD

CURTISS FIELD, N. Y., May 13.—UP—Co. Roscoe Turner, with a Hon cub as his mascot, landed his express model Lockheed plane here at 8:40 p. m. today, failing by some more than an hour in his attempt to set a new record for a one-stop transcontinental flight.

The record Turner sought to better was that of 14 hours, 23 minutes and 27 seconds, established recently by Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh. Turner's estimated time was 15 hours and 40 minutes.

The flier took off from Los Angeles at 1 a. m. (PST) which is equivalent to 5 a. m. (EDT). He thus would have had to reach here by 7:23 p. m. to establish a new coast to coast mark.

Turner had been expected to bring down his plane at neighboring Roosevelt field, but darkness had set in before he reached his destination and it was assumed he was familiar with the local fields. Virtually all of his fuel was exhausted at the time of his landing, although gasoline was taken on board during the one stop at Wichita, Kansas.

"I had bad weather most of the way, running through storms over most of Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania," Turner said.

He was asked if he intended to try again for the record.

"I can't say at this time," he replied.

The Enigma of the Romantic Woman

ONCE upon a time there was a Romantic Woman who believed that love was the greatest thing in the world. Who visualized the little blind god as perched upon the Car of Juggernaut.

With the divine right to ride roughshod over everything—and every person.

She was beautiful, with the red-gold hair painted so gloriously by Titian.

With those hazel eyes which seem to change every minute in color and expression.

With brow and nose aligned in the beautiful Greek modeling.

And a mouth for kisses and laughter.

She grew up living the happy, healthy life of many an American girl.

She went to school, and devoted little boys carried her books—

Before she was ten, they were devoted.

And she did nothing to discourage them, for even as a child

She was romantic and liked to imagine herself the princess sought by hundreds of suitors in every fairy story.

After college she dreamed—romantically—of doing a great deal of good in the world.

So, between dances and house parties, she took classes in a settlement house, and visited hospitals.

That is, she did these things for a year and a half.

Until she fell overwhelmingly in love—for the first time.

He was an eminently satisfactory young man—

There was a beautiful wedding.

For a handsome, apparently well-matched, obviously blissful young couple.

They went on a honeymoon to Hawaii.

And returned to live happily ever after in a duplex apartment, a winter home in Florida, a summer home in Maine.

The Romantic Woman never doubted that she was in love to stay.

And the only thing left to make her even happier.

Soon arrived in the person of a healthy and vigorous young son.

She mothered him devotedly, from the time he was born.

And he adored her—as his father apparently did.

People pointed to this marriage as proof.

That, after all, the Younger Generation could find a happy home.

And practice all the old-fashioned graces and virtues.

So went five years of life for the Romantic Woman.

And then—was she to blame or merely a victim?—the rumors began.

The gossip whispered that the Ideal Couple was disintegrating into a mere two.

That each was finding new friends, new interests.

And that sooner or later "there'll be a bust-up."

The gossip, as usual, were unpleasantly right.

The Romantic Woman, as we remarked, believed in love's right of way.

Over convention, legal bonds and the status quo—overwhelmingly in love, with one of the boys who used to carry home her books.

And who now was a successful lawyer—also a husband and a father.

His wife at first ching to the old notion.

That her husband belonged to her.

That, as Octavia, she possessed rights in her Mark Antony.

Which the Romantic Woman must respect—though she be another Cleopatra.

"But I love you and nothing else matters!" argued the Romantic Woman.

She had her way—and love the right of way.

She and her husband were divorced, according to pre-arranged formula.

She left forever her first home, as a wife, her first-born son.

That first love, in which she had believed, she now found to be a lie.

And she considered that living with a man whom she no longer loved was living a lie.

And that her new, true, splendid love must be acknowledged before the world.

The lawyer's first wife, though still bitter about the whole affair, had been persuaded to obtain a divorce.

As one condition of which she kept her three girls.

With all legal impediments thus cleared from their path.

The Romantic Woman and the lawyer became man and wife.

And she was honestly, ardently, deeply convinced that their love was the greatest thing in the world.

That it must last forever—that it was an end justifying any means.

And that, this time, she really would live happily ever after!

For a while it seemed as if she were right.

She and her new husband apparently shared every interest.

She sharpened and hardened her mental processes so that she could help him prepare his cases.

She always attended court on the days when he was to plead.

They went into the deep woods, on long camping trips.

They became enthusiastically air-minded and flew at every opportunity.

As final proof of their love that had demanded so many sacrifices.

They produced two lovely children, a boy and a girl.

And their home life appeared to be utterly happy and serene.

"For once, divorce, yes, double divorce, is justified of its fruitless friends," exclaimed even conservative friends.

Yet one more chapter remained to be written in the Romantic Woman's love story.

One day the world heard that the Great Lover for whom she had given up everything else.

Had found that still a third woman was the Great Love of his life.

He wanted to marry his stenographer.

And, when the Romantic Woman quietly divorced him, he did.

No, she hasn't married again—and she won't.

She hasn't even written her true confessions—and she won't.

She is merely trying, in her European seclusion, to solve a triple-headed enigma:

Because she left a husband and child and took another woman's husband, who left children.

Is she a victim of deserved punishment—though she acted in the name of Love?

Or is she an example of good sportsmanship—since, in the name of Love.

She gave to another woman her second husband, whom she still loved?

And, finally, is it wise, or right, or happy to make of romantic love a god demanding every sacrifice—To be, in brief, a Romantic Woman?

To a Drooping Daisy

SOME few weeks ago we printed here a little reminder to the girl whose looks are at their best in warm weather. Just a friendly word of advice, you know, that she make the most of herself now that her season is at hand.

And then along came a letter from a girl who is obviously not a sunflower, asking us what we mean to do by the poor girl whose looks are at their worst in warm weather.

Well, one thing we mean to do—and it did seem reasonable at the time—was to wait until we had some warm weather, when the problems of sticky, stubborn hair and dull eyes and so forth are real.

Never mind, though, Winter Girl, you shall have your way with this column. Besides, we want to suggest a few preventive measures before the torrid days set in. We want particularly to recommend that you build up a reserve fund of energy. Something to carry you over the lackadaisical days. Cold weather is a stimulant, you know, like a cold shower. In a sense, it is a false stimulant.

What you need is inherent energy to keep your hair and eyes and skin and self thoroughly alive—in spite of enervating weather. Which energy—as we need not tell you—is generated from wholesome food and deep breathing and lots of milk, water and sleep.

And with that energy will come nerve control, poise, the secret of keeping cool and looking cool when the rest of the world is wilting. Oily,

AD, why isn't Saturday Sunday?

"Why isn't Saturday Sunday? What a ridiculous question! Saturday isn't Sunday because it's Saturday."

"Why don't we have church on Saturday?"

"Why, because Saturday isn't Sunday. We have church on Sunday."

"Isn't the Jewish Sunday Saturday?"

"Oh, go to bed."

AN UNDIVIDED CLUMP, CUT AT BLACK LINE WITH A SHARP KNIFE, LEAVING A GENEROUS PORTION FOR EACH EYE.

NEVER wait until planting time to divide dahlia tubers. The shoots will become too long and might be injured when cut. Should the tubers have long shoots, never tear these off, but rather cut them back close to the crown. This will give them a chance to sprout again. The first step in this work, especially if not accustomed to dividing tubers, is to examine them carefully.

Disciples of Gandhi

Some time ago it was reported that one of Gandhi's most fervent disciples was an English woman of rank, who had abandoned society to follow the Hindu leader. A Budapest paper now adds that a certain Transylvanian lady has followed this example. She is Mrs. Aladar Vertessy, who was famous for her beauty and wealth. A few years ago, at Szovata, a fashionable watering place in Transylvania, Mrs. Vertessy won the prize for beauty in a dancing competition at which Queen Marie of Roumania was present. Three years ago Mrs. Vertessy paid a visit to India, came under the influence of Gandhi, and became one of his most devoted adherents. On her return to Transylvania she sold her estate, her forest, her castle and her art treasures and jewelry, and raising all the money that stood to her credit in the banks, she traveled back to India and presented the entire sum to the convent which Gandhi had founded. With shaven head, barefooted and wearing a hair shirt, Mrs. Vertessy now passes her days in the hardest physical labor, alternated by begging from the wretched inhabitants of the neighborhood. Mrs. Vertessy's sole relic of her former life is a portrait of her mother, and her only pleasure is the arrival of a letter from Gandhi once or twice during the year.

United

Germany

The Germans, if we are to believe the Berlin Kreuz Zeitung, are apparently looking for the return of happy days. "Before ten years are over the German Empire will be mightier than ever before," says that paper. The first item on the program is the union with Austria, and after that the German minorities in the Tyrol, Poland and the Saar region are expected to be brought back into the fold. There is no mention of Alsace-Lorraine, but the idea alone of a united Germany eighty or ninety millions strong is enough to make French statesmen look with apprehension to the future. "Nothing can keep brother away from brother in the end," says another paper, this time in Vienna, in making a plea for the speedy consummation of the union between the two countries. The Germans seem to count on Mussolini to aid them in their plans. They want to make capital out of the rigidity of France's attitude between Italy and France since the war. But just as much as Austria and Germany are brothers, France and Italy are brothers. And in the end blood will be thicker than water, as it proved to be in 1918.

Candor

In these days of shiftiness and hypocrisy, writes a correspondent to the Manchester Guardian, it is surely up to us all to pay a tribute to unaffected candor wherever we find it, especially in the notoriously modest little world of thespians. A case in point is the suit for $175,000 damages for negligence and breach of contract which Miss Mae Murray had brought against a Hollywood producing company, in which she claims knowledge in her affidavit that her services were "excellent, special, rare, unique, extraordinary, unusual, uncommon, and of a peculiar and intellectual class." That is the way that most of us feel about our jobs, adds the writer, but somehow or other, when it comes to the point of telling the boss in such well-chosen words.

LISTEN MY CHILDREN

TO-NIGHT'S lesson in contract bridge: Good evening, ladies and gentlemen of the bridge fiend audience. To-night we shall broadcast the weekly contract bridge game by courtesy of the Chicago Bon Bon Dish Company.

The cards have just been dealt and let's see what we have. Dear, dear: Mr. Mellish has fourteen cards. Must be a mistake somewhere. Oh, no! everything's O. K. Mr. Juniper forgot to take out the joker. There, now; that's better. Here's the way the hands read:

MR. MELLISH, Spades—K, J, 9, 3, Hearts—A, Q, J, 10, 9, 6, 3, Clubs—K, Diamonds—7.

MRS. KISH, Spades—10, 6, Hearts—7, 4, Diamonds—10, 8, 5, 4, Clubs—A, J, 9, 8, 4.

MR. JUNIPER, Spades—A, 8, 2, Hearts—K, 2, Diamonds—A, Q, J, 9, 6, 3, Clubs—3, 2.

MRS. BRUFF, Spades—Q, 7, 5, 4, Hearts—A, 8, Diamonds—K, 2, Clubs—Q, 10, 7, 6, 5.

Now for the game. Mr. Mellish hums the Maine Stein Song for three or four minutes, waiting for Mrs. Bruff to bid. He suddenly discovers they are waiting for him to start bidding and in his embarrassment he passes. Mrs. Kish is getting an eyeful of Mrs. Bruff's new overgapes, her Louis XIV. table and the nicks in the baby grand piano. She evidently thinks this is a rubber game. She passes without looking at her cards.

Mr. Juniper, who is hard of hearing, doubles. The other three want to know what he doubled. Mr. Juniper, in confusion, says he was dreaming it was his turn at bat and he had knocked a two-bagger down the left foul line. He apologizes and says no bid. Mrs. Bruff has just caught sight of some cobwebs on her ceiling and is framing a speech for bawling out the maid. She would like to murder Annie in cold blood, but passes instead.

All four players have passed. Now let us examine the science of their bids. Mr. Mellish has a peach of a heart bid, but is mortified into passing because he had delayed the game. The lesson from this is that smart bridge players should never hum while at the table, especially the Maine Stein Song. One of the best means of the game is to keep your mouth shut and even when it's shut don't try to hum.

Mrs. Kish didn't have a bid anyway, but even if she had thirteen cards of one suit she would have passed, she was so busy guessing what the price tags were for Mrs. Bruff's new furnishings. A female player, to bid and play correctly, should imagine she was in a padded cell and not let her eyes rove to pieces of furniture that have been bought either outright or on instalments, since the last time she paid a call.

Mr. Juniper should have bidden in diamonds, but he is just one of those wet rags that spoil any bridge game. He doesn't care a damn about bridge anyway and shouldn't have been invited. The mistake was in asking him as all.

Mrs. Bruff did right in passing, but she was all wrong in letting a couple of cobwebs set her crazy. She should have had the maid dust the room thoroughly, especially with a rubber-neck like Mrs. Kish coming in. But so long as Annie mends the cobwebs, what's the use of stewing about it?

These, then, are the primary rules for good bridge playing: No. 1—No humming. No. 2—No housewife's bareneck. No. 3—Don't invite wet blankets. No. 4—Don't fret about prying eyes.

Observe these rules and we shall have better and more enjoyable bridge games. The scores are unimportant, after all. Next week, on this same hook-up, we will discuss how many pounds of hard candy and bon-bons are needed for a party of sixteen.

GOLDEN DAWN

This story is based on Warner Bros. Vitaphone production of the play by Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein II.

SYNOPSIS
Tom Allen, young plantation owner, is on his way, escorted, through the jungle to the prison camp. The Germans have seized the British territory of the East African Protectorate. Eric, the German commander, is his friend. Dawn, mystery girl, is that same night being reluctantly initiated into pagan rites as bride of the native god. Dawn and Tom are infatuated with one another. Tom has just learned that she is as white of blood as himself. Till he knew this, he had been troubled. She, sinister, whipman, before action, the native cringe is in the vicinity, and intends to reveal his base passion on Dawn, who will be chained till morning.

INSTALLMENT TWELVE
"Oh, have no fear of Malungu," Tom urged. "Let's risk everything. It's worth risking for our happiness, isn't it?"
But Dawn was firm in her determination to remain. "You must not talk to me like that, my Tom," she counseled. "Tomorrow—almost the bride of Malungu! To night I must be alone. The black god will kill you!"
A scornful laugh escaped Tom. "Black god? Yes, a cigarette-smoking black god."
"I don't know what you mean, Tom," said Dawn.
"I don't want to leave you here alone. That black fiend Shep is about somewhere."
"Yes, he is, white man," Shep's voice sounded abruptly from the bushes, and presently he stood forth.
Suddenly she heard the shrill cry break under the weight of a falling body. There was a moment of silence, followed by a gloating note of victory. Silence, then she heard foot-steps on the twigs, each drawing the victor nearer to her. She closed her eyes against the moonlight, her heart dead within her. Dawn kept her eyes closed tight, though she knew the conqueror on the violent combat stood watching her. For several seconds there was silence. The suspense grew intolerable and she opened her eyes. They rested on Tom, his hair disheveled, his clothes in shreds and his face purpled with bruises.
"My Tom!" She could utter no more. Her love for him and her uncontrollable joy at finding him, and not Shep, left her voiceless. Again she tugged at her chains, impatient to be in his arms.
But Tom did not come to her at once. She saw that he held Shep's whip which he snapped at some unseen object in the brush.
"Come out of there," he commanded. "Come!"
There was a stir in the thicket and soon Shep emerged, alternating his groans of pain with pleas for mercy.
"Please, white man," he whined. "Please!"
Though exhausted and kept upright only by will-power, Tom could not afford to lose his precious advantage. He carried the whip, cautiously close to the whip man's ears and uttered another command. Shep, thoroughly beaten, drew himself almost on his belly to Tom's feet and there crunched like a slave.
"Wait, white man, wait!" he pleaded. "Don't use that whip on me no more. Don't whip me no more. Lives up to you. Let me go away!"
Tom was uncertain just how to dispose of Shep.
"I ought to cut you into strips," he told Shep harshly, and I will if you try anything. Get up," he ordered, raising the whip.
Releasing a shrill yell of fright, Shep thrust both hands toward Tom in a pail for pity. "I can't get up. Hones' white man, I've too beat up to stand up. Please don't whip me no more!" He fell forward, groveling.
"Get up," repeated Tom. "Get up or you never will!"
Dawn interceded for the miserable black. "Don't, Tom, don't hit him any more!" she begged.
Tom lowered the whip. Shep turned grateful eyes on Dawn, but still cringed at Tom's feet. Tom stood silent.
"All right," he agreed, "now get out of here, Shep. Get out, and remember if I ever have occasion to use your whip on you again there can be nothing to stop me."

TEARFUL VOICE
WINS COLLEEN
DIVORCE

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—UP—Colleen Moore, she of the movies' trickiest haircuts, obtained a divorce today when she accused John McCormick, her husband, of being always in bad humor.

"And he never would apologize," said the tearful Miss Moore.

So, Superior Judge Thomas Gould granted her an interlocutory decree against the motion picture-producer husband.

Ugly Mood.

"He always was in an ugly mood when my friends called," continued the blue-eyed actress, who wore a blue dress to match. "He would say they bored him, and that they did not have any taste."

And that wasn't all, she told Judge Gould. Last Christmas eve for instance, she said McCormick drove his automobile across the lawn of their home.

"Was he intoxicated?" asked the judge.

"Yes, he was," sobbed Miss Moore.

Pair Part

She said they separated finally last March when she returned to their home from a hospital where she had undergone a surgical operation. A nurse accompanied her.

"When the nurse and I arrived," said Miss Moore, "Mr. McCormick ordered us from the house. I had no choice, and simply left. He had become worse and worse, and I couldn't stand it any more."

They were married August 18, 1923.

Damon, Pythias
Car Drivers
Pay Fines

MARTINEZ, May 13.—Damon and Pythias have nothing on R. W. Law and Charles B. Reynolds, Pittsburgh welders.

The two men are close friends, and Saturday night when Reynolds ran afoul of the law and was charged with drunken driving, Law felt properly sorry for his friend. Yesterday the complaint was reduced to reckless driving, and Police Judge Frank Glass fined Reynolds $200 with the alternative of spending 200 days in the county jail.

Law then stepped into the picture and after a period of scurrying around, raised the money and delivered Reynolds from the toils of the law.

The two men left the jail arm in arm, Reynolds a trifle remorseful, and Law delighted that he could show his friendship for his pal.

A few hours later the men separated, Reynolds going his way and Law going his, although according to police reports, Law was making numerous detours while driving along the highway.

The result was the same as in Reynolds' case, and Law was cited for driving while under the influence of liquor. Judge Glass, still feeling magnanimous, reduced the charge to reckless driving, and assessed the $200 fine with the pleasant alternative of spending 200 days "inside looking out."

The Damon and Pythias act was once more produced for the benefit of the county treasury, and Reynolds repaid his pal by producing the $200 fine.

Once more the two men departed from the county jail arm in arm.

RAIL DISPUTE
SETTLEMENT
SEEN

PORTLAND, Ore., May 13.—UP—There is still hope of bringing about unification of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific railroads, despite adverse reports from Wall Street, Arthur Curtis James, railroad magnate said here today.

"The interstate commerce commission's order that the Great Northern dispose of the Burlington as a condition of the unification of the two Northerns, is a real obstacle in the way of the merger," James said.

"However, there is a chance that we can find a way to overcome the obstacle. The commission has indicated that it will consider an alternative situation by which the northern lines will be assured entry into Chicago from the northwest. I still believe that the great economies that could be brought about by the unification would react to the benefit of the public. We have not abandoned the plan."

James, who stopped off here en route between trains, said business is recovering slowly but surely from the terrific "headache" that followed the recent Wall street crash. He arrived with a party of railroad officials from Seattle and left for Klamath Falls and San Francisco in company with T. M. Schumaker, chairman of the executive committee of the Western Pacific.

The projected extension of the Great Northern into California territory to join with the Western Pacific for San Francisco entry, is still the project of major importance in the program of Mr. James and his associates. The case is now before the interstate commerce commission.

New Trouble
Looms In Texas Riots

SHERMAN, May 3.—UP—Orders to shoot to kill and to question every person seen on streets after dusk were issued tonight by Col. L. S. McGee, commander of the Texas National Guard, guarding Sherman against a repetition of rioting which resulted in the firing of the Grayson county courthouse and the burning of a negro.

Col. McGee said he had been warned trouble could be expected. He said death threats written on a typewriter and unsigned had been tacked to the doors of negro residents. A Sherman contractor was given 36 hours in which to replace negro workmen with white men or his business establishment would be burned.

INDIAN REVOLT
NEW MODE IN REBELLION

By WEBB MILLER
United Press Staff Correspondent
World copyright, 1930, by U. P.

KARACHI, India May 13.—UP—In the present uprising in India the world is witnessing the most remarkable experiment in political rebellion in history—a revolution without arms, and based upon non-violence.

The principal weapons used are boycotts and mass disobedience to certain selected laws. Apparently the Swarajists, or leaders of this civil disobedience campaign headed by Mahatma Gandhi, now jailed, are making no effort whatever to secure arms, over which the government exercises the strictest control to prevent their import.

Whatever violent outbreaks have occurred are in direct disobedience to instructions from Gandhi or other Swarajist leaders.

Opinions Differ

Naturally, there is a great difference of opinion whether the non-violent move can succeed. The Swarajist leaders are confident the combination of the boycott and civil disobedience will force the government to make concessions within a few months. The British, on the other hand, maintain that enthusiasm for the campaign will evaporate rapidly, especially in view of the government's policy of ignoring the mass disobedience, which is too difficult to handle. They are simply arresting the leaders, one by one.

Although a similar method of non-violent rebellion was attempted 10 years ago, this is the first time anything like it has occurred on such a scale and with such magnitude. Despite the arrest of Gandhi, who inspired the movement, the Swarajists insist non-violence is the fundamental policy.

The Evening News, an important organ of the all-India congress in Bombay said:

Fight On

"Non violence is the pivotal point and cornerstone of the Swarajist struggle. The fact must be emphasized that non-violence is the shield, sheet and anchor of our struggle. The struggle has only commenced and the end, whether far or near, cannot be visualized at the moment. But one thing is certain: Its final destination is inevitable. The whole country is impregnated with the spirit of freedom."

Despite the reiterated policy of the avoidance of violence, the congress at present is organizing a force which the government and moderates in the Swarajist movement fear eventually will result in more blood shed—the "Ghandi volunteers," somewhat resembling an army or unofficial police force.

The leaders are called captains and wear as their emblem a red sash over one shoulder. The volunteers frequently exercise unofficially the functions of police in connection with the demonstrations. They serve as pickets to enforce boycotts on liquor and cloth shops, and act as propagandists to enroll new members of the congress party.

Visits Meet

I visited the local civic disobedience headquarters on Bunder road, the main street in the native city of Karachi. About 50 young men were present, dressed in long coats and loose trousers of coarse, homespun material, some carrying the congress flag. The scene was similar to a ward political headquarters in the United States.

The men scowled. They obviously did not welcome visitors, but readily furnished a volunteer guide when they learned I wished to talk with their present leader. The former leader recently was among the many jailed.

R. K. Sidhwa, the present leader, a port commissioner and municipal councillor, pleasantly and readily explained the organization of the volunteers. He said there were 800 volunteers now in Karachi and that hundreds of others had volunteered. These, he said, for the moment had been refused because they had not sufficient organization to deal with them.

Enlist Women

He said they were making every effort to enlist women because the policy of the Swarajists is to try to free women from social bondage which they have suffered in India for centuries. They are therefore, spreading propaganda among the women as much as possible.

Last night's defiance of the salt laws, for example, was confined to women. A package of illegal salt was auctioned and women bought it in for 25 rupees ($3.75). Men's bids were refused. The part of the movement to interest women is one of the most significant phases of the Swarajist propaganda.

Paradoxically enough, the intellectual impetus for Swarajist originated in Great Britain. It was the effort of British rulers to spread the benefits of western civilization, education and culture which has largely awakened the political consciousness of the educated classes of India and led to an increasingly loud demand for a greater share in self-government.

Jobs Scarce

Another factor was the after effects of the great war in Europe. President Wilson's slogan of self-determination for peoples was re-

In Third Grade

Lions Honor Local
Gold Star Mothers

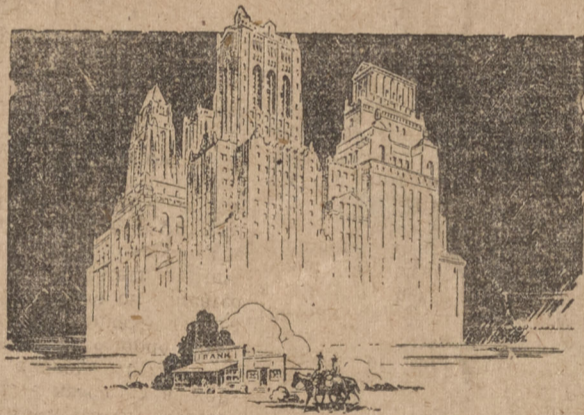

Yet another angle was stressed in a conversation I had with Mahatma, a Moslem leader, member of the legislative assembly, a well-known lawyer educated in England. He pointed out that 15 modern universities in India annually turned out tens of thousands of educated men, imbued with Western culture, who cannot find suitable jobs. The best posts in the army or in civil service are for the British, or are already filled. The result is dissatisfaction, and many join the ranks of the home rule agitators hoping some rule will create jobs.

Roosevelt School
Pupils Lauded
For Poster Work

According to an announcement yesterday, eight pupils of the seventh and eighth grades of the Roosevelt junior schools have won prizes in the recent poster contest to advertise the opera, "Tulip Time" which will be presented in the school auditorium May 23.

In the seventh grade, prizes were won by Ed Garrard, Earl Birch, Matilda Dudziaz, and Catherine Bastin. In the eighth grade prizes were won by Audrey Clark, Jeanette Hasdell, Evelyn Machado and Amy Schwartz.

The posters were judged by Mrs. Bertha Pedrotti, president-elect of the Richmond P. T. A. council, Miss Maybelle Woodman, art supervisor, and R. Condyser, of the Roosevelt faculty. Miss Betty Jo Hodges and Miss Anna Lang supervised the work.

Progress in Banking

California's first iron safe arrived at Santa Barbara in 1846. The first banks were private enterprises for the exchange, transfer or safe-keeping of gold dust . . . Under the primitive conditions of eighty years ago, such banks answered every purpose . . . But Californians soon realized that gold was not their most important asset . . . As agriculture, commerce, and industry found a place in the new State, a stabilized and efficient banking system was born—a system that has won national recognition and reputation.

The Bank of America—with roots deep in the pioneer past—is a logical result of progress in California. Throughout the State—in 160 business centers—it affords the utmost in modern banking facilities. Each of its half million depositors, from the Oregon line to the Mexican border, enjoys the full protection of its strength—the helpfulness of its unsurpassed ability to serve.
